LOCUM TENENS FOR NEW GRADS

Many new physicians leave their first job after only a year for a variety of reasons that often boil down to those jobs not being a good fit. As a new grad, what can you do to prevent this from happening to you? Working with MedPartners Locum Tenens can give you the advantage of having experienced Physician Consultants match you with the right position for your needs and wants.

ENJOY THE FREEDOM OF LOCUM TENENS

Many new grads feel that when residency comes to an end, life is no longer on hold. Sometimes this new freedom leads to taking a first job based purely on a desirable location, family ties to an area, or financial incentives. Yet, there is so much more to choosing the right job to start off your career than any one of those things.

That's why locum tenens is a great way to explore different options before you enter into a fellowship or commit to a facility. You can work in different locations, different types of facilities and hospital settings, and broaden your professional network. It's ideal for test driving the type of place you want to work in for the long haul through hands-on experience. You may even find that you truly enjoy working in an environment different from what you originally had in mind.

OPTIMIZE YOUR OPTIONS

Some new physicians are set on working in a particular city that fits into their ideal lifestyle or because they have family ties to that location. However, many large metropolitan areas already have a great number of physicians competing for jobs. This often means that these areas do not offer the great rates and benefits that can be found in other places. The cost of living may also be much higher in a trendy city, cutting further into compensation. These factors together may make it difficult to make ends meet when you're a physician just starting out.

Teaming up with a Physician Consultant from MedPartners Locum Tenens can help you find positions across the country that offer you the level of compensation and benefits you desire. Many new physicians use this opportunity to get a jump on those student loans by taking a series of locum positions and getting experience at the same time.

Locum tenens also allows you to work in terms of smaller time frames if you wish, as opposed to being locked into a recruitment agreement for several years. If you find yourself in a position where you really love the area and the facility, locums-to-perm is sometimes an option as well.

IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY

Sometimes new grads end up accepting positions that are not an ideal fit out of necessity because they wait too long to start looking. The industry typically recommends that you begin your search a year to a year and a half before you graduate so you can evaluate all of your options. Locum tenens can give you a little more time to figure out where you ultimately want to end up and you can chip away at student loans in the meantime.

Working with a Physician Consultant from MedPartners Locum Tenens can help you prepare for what to do next. Take advantage of the network of contacts available to a recruiter right from the start and get connected to the kinds of facilities you are interested in working with.
